HEADLINES:

POL: MPC member Wiesław Janczyk said that the current level of interest rates was appropriate given the current macroeconomic data. In his view a decline in CPI in November stemmed from lower prices of fuels and from decline in prices of energy raw materials including coal. He underlined that inflation would peak in February next year due to expiration of anti-inflation shield. According to his estimates inflation would be declining starting from Q2 2023 and would likely reach single digit level by the end of 2023. He said coming economic slowdown in Poland would be relatively shallow and added he expected soft landing of economy due, among others to negative real interest rates maintained by the central bank. He underlined that slower growth in Poland would be mainly a result of external factors – weaker economic growth abroad and high prices of energy commodities. He supported an opinion of the MPC to the State budget act saying that fiscal policy in 2023 would be neutral to the economy.
